Way down in "Somewhere Land" there is a house called the House of "Good Things." In this house are the most delictone cakes, bread, rolls, pies, cookles, doughnuts, muffins, tarts, all light, white and beautiful aithe to the senses of anyth and taste. Very few families ever see the inside of this house without our key, for it is locked. For the benefit of those families who wish to partake of the dainties of this House of "Good Things" down in "Somewhere Land," we present a key which unlocks its doors. Here is the key: Flour.

The Permanent Exhibition of the Schools Opened.

TRAINING HAND AND EYE.

Now Arranged in the Franklin Building-Boys and Girls Who Have Learned to De sign and Make Things.

The good people of this city do not have to go to Chicago in order to see a creditable and interesting exhibition. Such a display was opened up to the public last evening in the form of a permanent exhibit of the work of opened up to the public last evening in the form of a permanent exhibit of the work of the students of the public schools of the District as samples of what they can do after the preparation that comes from a thorough course of manual training.

The exhibit is in the big hall at the top of the Franklin school building, and well repays a visit not only from the parents of the scholars in the public schools, but from all those who are interested in the work of the development of the latent possibilities of the young. It is no small thing to realize that a boy of fifteen can make a turning lathe of iron and steel that is a masterjeec of workmanship and that is of a sort that makes it good enough to be used in any shop. It is no small thing for a girl of the same age to be able to design, cut and fit a dress that in style, appearance and finish would do credit to an experienced modiste. Yet exhibits of this sort are to be seen now at the Franklin School, and are enough to make the most chronic grumbler leave off his complaint that the students in our schools today are not being taught anything useful. The exhibit opened last evening, and while but little was known of it beforehand, there was a fair attendance, and all those who asw it were enthusiastic in their praise of the system which could show such good results. The exhibition will be open from now on, morning, afternoon and evening, and it is thought that the attendance will increase until it taxes the resources of the big hall.

MANUAL TRAINING IN THE SCHOOLS.

THE THE PRICE SITES, DEADS SUITE, SUITE, DECORE AND RINGLE-BREATED TWO-PIECE SUITE, SU

The Progress so The work as well.

The Progress shown through the different years up to the fourth-year work in the High School, when some very creditable drawings from casts and from figures, water-color sketches and sketches from still life are to be seen. Nor is the work by any means all theoretical. There are samples of designing work that would have a commercial value in the market. There are designs for wall papers, done in color and with most pleasing effects.

Although rather less extensive in scope than the work of the boys the exhibit made by the grie in the public schools is quite as creditable and every bit as interesting. There are spectmens of modeling, drawing and designing quite as good as anything done by their brothers. The part of their display in which Mr. Powel seems to take the most interest, however, is the sewing schools. From the simplest little tucks and homs, done with long and rather ragged stitches by the little gris, there is a steady growth shown until the finest results are to be seen in the completed gowns and articles of underclothing that are on exhibition. Specimens of darning that would do credit to a thorough housewife are there, rents in cloth and big holes in stockings that have been made almost as good as new. The girls are taught, as are the boys in their line of work, to design the work they are going to do. They are taught to cut and it by the most approved systems and make their patterns and designs in paper in a thorough year of the port work, to design the work they are going to do. They are taught to cut and all by the most approved systems and make their patterns and designs in paper in a thorough year of the power works and are the patterns and designs in paper in a thorough year of the work they are going to do. They are taught, as are the boys in their l Curiously enough, it is not the children of the poor who have taken all the interest in this manual training. According to Mr. Powell some of the very best work among the girls has been done by the daughters of rich parents, who may never have to make their own drosses, but who realize that it is a good thing for them to know how they should be made. The same thing is true with the boys. Many of them will probably never have occasion to seek employment as iron workers or wood turners. Not all of them are embryo architects and artists. Still their parents have seen the good effects that come from efficient training in the use of one's hands and have lent their heartiest co-operation to the teachers in their work.

OPEN TO SUGGESTIONS. OPEN TO SUGGESTIONS.

"I hope that The Star will call attention to this exhibition," said Superintendent Powell to a Star reporter this morning. "I want every one to see it who is in any way interested in the education of the young, for I think that this collection reflects the greatest credit on the scholars and on their teachers. It has not been done at the expense of the other branches of education, either. For example, the girls only see for an hour a week, and I feel confident that the good results accomplished make the best kind of a return for the time spent. The girls and the boys too, look on this work as a sort of relaxation and change from their other work and seem to take the greatest interest in it. I would like to have the people of this city examine this exhibit before they go out to Chicago, for I feel is a pretty sure that it will compare favorably with any display of the sort they will see there. If it doesn't, then let them come back and find all the fault they want with our system. We are open to suggestions."
